Table 5: Content type classification rates

As described above, the classification uses a large database of hash values identifying individual BitTorrent or eDonkey files. As a comparison, we have run the content classification procedure using last year's database. The classification rate was much lower. Putting it in proportion with this year's results revealed a very high file churn rate. 80% of all BitTorrent files and 90% of all eDonkey files have been exchanged.

The pie charts on page 5 and 6 provide an overview of the content types exchanged with BitTorrent and eDonkey. Categories (Audio, Video, Software, Picture, eBook) are represented by different colors and subcategories by individual pie slices. The leading BitTorrent content are video files with a share between 62% in Southern Europe and 79% in Germany. Southern Europe has a particularly high amount of software traffic – 26% compared to 6% in Germany and the Middle East. German BitTorrent users download more porn (13%) than the other regions (2% and 5%).

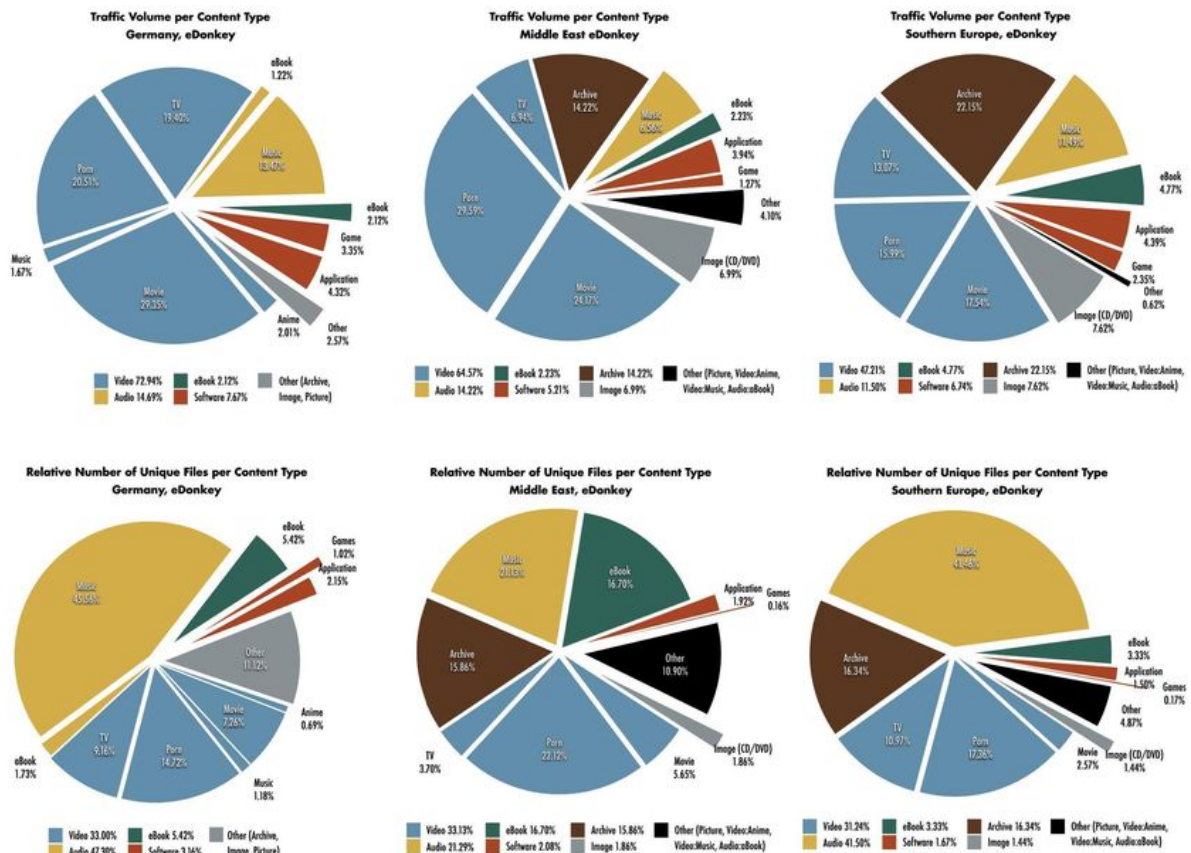

For certain content types, the number of unique files being downloaded are more meaningful. Movie files are large, so a smaller number of files can generate a high traffic volume. Music and eBook files are much smaller in size than for instance movies thus leaving a pronounced impression only in the file number statistics. In the Middle East, eBooks are particularly popular with nearly 11% of all encountered files.

The German eDonkey content looks similar to the BitTorrent counterpart with regard to traffic volume. eDonkey has a slightly higher share of porn and music. Looking at the file number data, the overall picture is quite different. Audio, particularly music, has much more files as in BitTorrent. This effect can be explained by the different methods to share a file. For eDonkey, this happens automatically as soon as a file has been downloaded and made available for uploads. For BitTorrent, a few administrative steps are required to share a file. Thus, small files appear quite often in eDonkey, but not in BitTorrent, where music and other small files are usually shared as part of larger collections compressed in one file.

For eDonkey, the discrepancy between traffic volume and number of files for video content has grown in comparison to last year. This is due a trend towards larger, higher-quality videos and a concentration on a few blockbuster movies. There is more porn for eDonkey in the Middle East than in the other regions.

The complete content type distribution and the top-75 titles per category are listed in Appendix 2. The BitTorrent top-75 lists are sorted by popularity (see next section) and the eDonkey lists are sorted by traffic volume.
